COPPER COUNTRY HARD HIT.

How much was lost by Calumet speculators and investors during the slump of the last three weeks? This is the question which has been asked repeatedly. It would be impossible to give any kind of an estimate of the total loss sustained. Scarcely a person who does much dealing in copper stocks but now has a paper or actual loss as the case may be.

It was the class of speculators who dealt on margins who were hit hardest in the slump. Some were entirely wiped out in the declines, and even stand today indebted to their broker. There are others who have little left but the courage to start once more and try to beat the game which has made some wealthy and broken others.

One elderly copper country resident was most unfortunate. He bought fifty shares of Calumet & Arizona toward the top price, and put up what was generally looked upon as an extremely safe margin. He had only a short time before disposed of his business and invested the proceeds in the stock. He watched the price melt away like the snow before a hot June sun, and finally was called upon for margin to protect his account. He was unable to raise more money and was sold out. Today he stands with a paltry sum of money to his credit with which to start out life again, a condition from which many men much younger would shrink.

Another Calumet man had about $18,000 invested in North Butte on a very conservative margin. He watched the stock break below $100 and finally when it went to less than one-half that price he was sold out. He received a statement showing that out of the $18,000 that he had invested he had to his credit $1.53.
